

THE HISTORY OF MENDER BAR

Built in 1887 as an exact replica of London's House of Lords Pub, The Menger Bar does not just feel authentic- it is. The revered establishment features a paneled ceiling of dark cherry wood, hand carved mahogany wood imported from Europe, and beveled mirrors from France.

It was here at The Menger Bar that Theodore Roosevelt recruited some of his Rough Riders, the 1st U.S. Volunteer Cavalry. It's also where Roosevelt and his Rough Riders spent their time when they weren't training to fight the Spanish-American War. The Rough Riders were a group of cowboys, gamblers, hunters, prospectors, buffalo soldiers, college boys and Native Americans who fought the Spanish War of 1898. They trained at the International Fair Grounds by the Mission Reach of the River and deployed from San Antonio by train to Tampa.

This bar has seen more wheeling and dealing, more tall tales and furnished cold drinks to more figures in Texas and American History than any other bar in San Antonio and has been voted one of the Top 10 Most Historic Bars in the United States.
